

(Wednesday, June 21, 2006) Today, Chairman Peter T. King convened a full committee hearing to examine the Department of Homeland Security's (DHS) process of awarding anti-terrorism grants. This hearing came as a direct result of the recent DHS funding announcement that included 40% cuts to New York City and Washington, D.C. – two of the highest risk cities in the country. New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg and Washington, D.C. Mayor Anthony Williams testified.
